

Felicity's Testimony

I was born as a Muslim in a Muslim country. All I ever knew about Christianity is that Christianity was a corrupted religion. So I didn't bother learning about Christianity.

At age 14, in school they taught me about women's rights in Islam. As I read I found out that we don't have rights in Islam. I was really sad. I stopped believing in Islam because I didn't think that was right. But I didn't tell anybody.

After I graduated from college in the Middle East I worked with some Christians. From them I learned some good things about Christianity. I wanted to learn more.

Later I had the opportunity to come to the United States to continue my studies. Besides continuing my studies in college, I thought it would also be a good thing to learn more about Christianity.

Only 10 days after I moved here I met Bible teacher Dr. Cynthia. It was then I heard the gospel from her for the first time. For nearly a year I studied the Bible with her, and I asked very many questions. After this I was convinced that Christianity was the true religion. But before I would take the big step of becoming a Christian I thought I need a miracle or a sign before doing anything.

Two years later a man in white came into my dream. He said, "Look up these words, 'I put my trust in you.'" In the morning when I woke up I googled these words. It was a verse from Psalm 143:8. Then I decided to put my trust in Jesus. On May 1, 2016, I became a Christian.

It's not really easy for a Muslim to change their religion, but I did it. It's worth it to be loved by Jesus and walk with him.
